I would ask that you use statistical geographies drawn up by the ONS as the building blocks for all electoral geographies. How can anyone in any capacity get information about their areas when they are not build up from areas that data are published at. Please build up from Census Output Areas at the least, or even LSOAs.

It's staggering that you don't, and helps nobody, from councillors, to researchers, to the public when data are not available at exact ED level, but have to be (at best) bodged based on the robust statistical geographies.
