I appreciate the need for a review, but the idea of shoehorning a patently urban part of the district into a distinctly rural part of the district, with completely different issues and pressures, does seem to be a recipe for future administrative headaches. Whilst it may appear to be a solution to a knock on effect from other, probably sensible, parts of the review, it will almost certainly cause problems going forward, the nature of which I'm sure you're already fully aware from other responses.

Thank you for your hard work in formulating the review, but I object strongly to these proposals.
