Related subject: Draft proposal on dividing Oxshott

I don't agree with your draft proposals. Oxshott is a truly unified small English village. We have a small High Street, a single GP surgery for the whole Village, a single Village center, and a single church, which the whole village can hear its bells on Sunday morning. We have absolutely nothing to do with Claygate (and can't even get there without driving through Esther or going up the A3. We have much closer ties to Cobham as that is where we shop (not Esher, Claygate or Leatherhead.). In addition to all that, regarding the A244 speed/traffic situation, it is most crucial that the whole of the A244 from before the rail bridge to the Pachem Park roundabout is under the responsibility of a single counsellor. It seems as if the Council is trying to find an underhand way of 'shutting us up' in our efforts to get traffic control over the A244 through Oxshott, i.e. if respnsibility for the A244 through Oxshott can be divided up, then the buck can be passes back and forth.
