Related subject: District councillors

I am involved with a parish council and over the years have come to the conclusion that district councillors are primarily there to meet their party objectives not to serve the residents

They rarely make a difference in planning decisions as the system is stacked against residents.

On that basis I think the number should be reduced and they should be mandated to attend a min 75% of parish council meetings or have their allowance reduced.

Parish councils should be able to hold the officers of the council to account on the levels of service provided, instead of going via district councillors.
