Comment text:

Eldwick has undergone considerable population growth in the past decade involving many and mostly small and young families in spite of a large elderly population .
This has developed a very strong community with many local events but in some cases tied Bingley with its theatre and other amenities not available in Baildon including a town market The moor land does form a strong boundary particularly in winter months between the two areas with the lack of transport facilities It does seem most unnecessary to form an artificial split in the area when strong community values exist and should be valued in these fast changing times
