Related subject: Bingley

I'm writing to object to the above proposal.

Bingley is a small, thriving and active town, sadly unlike many others at the moment. It has great community events and aspirations. Lots of people are heavily involved in a range of activities and projects. This binds the community and results in a forward thinking and socially aware town, where many people have lived (and made a positive decision to stay in) for decades.

To divide the town into two (which is what the proposed boundary change would do) would be so destructive .

I can't think of a better way to destroy the community. People will become less involved in town planning and initiating events and provision for all residents. The dividing line would go right through the centre of the community and be damaging to the ethos and reputation that bingley has worked hard to create.

Ridiculous proposal in my opinion.
