By making the wards larger you are impacting on local say and independence of the electorate vote. This can't be just a cost saving exercise and impacts on local day. By amalgamating wards you are diluting this say. We are proud homesteaders and want our own councillors to represent our views and those that live in the area. A councillor from horndon can't relate to the issues in a different part of the town or borough. Keep the wards as they are. Or is this an attack on minorities and minority swing voters?
