I'm probably coming from a different angle here, and one which may not have been considered (and I will openly admit, may not be relevant)

I clean the river Freshney, on my canoe. I do this towards the town centre where there is more footfall, although there is approximately 6 miles upstream to its source. I have a team called the Freshney Comrades who help keep our River clean. These are made up of some amazing volunteers who live on Yarborough, Wybers Wood, the Willows, and Laceby Acres. They do this because they are proud of their area and also to increase their wellbeing. Naturally, we've had the support of the Freshney ward councillors who attend our litter picks, and help with concerns surrounding our river and adjacent green spaces.

Personally, I don't live in the area anymore, but I do have family and friends who say that the ward councillors get more stuff done than any previous councillors. They work incredibly well together, and to break this up would be a disaster in my view.

I doubt my thoughts carry much weight, but thank you for reading
